

5

Late News Tuesday, March 22, 1960

ROLL

(START FILM)...

The calendar says it's spring, but as far as Virginia was concerned today was a windy winter

day

TAKE

(SHOW FILM)...

Although the sun shone at times and the thermometer moved past the freezing mark, the heavy wind, battered the area with the help of snow flurries.

Several plate glass windows in Roanoke stores were blown out and several power lines were blown down by gales which reached 69 miles an hour. Several large trees were blown down. The wind remained keen and biting tonight, and the weatherman forecasts the windy, cold conditions will continue through tomorrow.

#