

Virginia's Lieutenant Governor Mills E. Godwin says Virginia must--and will change--and the change will be geared to future progress.

Godwin made the remarks at a groundbreaking ceremony today at Diamond Plastics in Roanoke.

The ground-breaking is for a million dollar expansion program at the plant, brought about by increased production.

Plant employes heard brief talks by Mayor Stoller, ~~the~~ plant President William H. Cummings, and Eli Lilly official, William R. Spurlock. All praised Diamond Plastics on its rapid rise since starting in Roanoke a few years ago.

(Start film)

The Lieutenant Governor--throwing away his prepared speech--had these remarks for his audience.

(Show film)

((Sound Up;))