Anybody who gets paid [^] for doing a sloppy job
(START FILM)... is getting more money than he deserves (SHOW FILM)...

That straight-from-the-shoulder advice was given tonight ^{to} ~~to~~ some 24 members of the Future Business Leaders of America, composed of Jefferson High School seniors and juniors. The speaker was the secretary to the business manager and clerk of the Roanoke City School Board - Mrs. Velma Hudson.
The class, which has Miss Anna Cronise and Paul Stegall as co-sponsors, is composed of students planning business careers.

Other advice given by Mrs. Hudson included:
"Show an interest in your job. Any pay you get is secondary to the kind of work you do. Handle money very carefully. Don't ever covet your boss' salary - and never quit a job before you have found another.
If you go two months without a job," Mrs. Hudson warned, "it's hard to get another, because people begin to wonder what's wrong with you."
