Vinton's Fourth Annual Dogwood Festival reaches a climax this afternoon with a parade, band concert, (SHOW FILM) and presentation of trophies. Tonight a new queen will be crowned at a Coronation Ball.

An estimated 25-hundred persons last night turned out to see an original pageant depicting the settlement of the Roanoke Valley.

Last year's queen--Pat Poindexter presided over the festival.

Sitting with her was TV Western Star Steve McQueen who will act as parade marshall today.

A cast of more than 300 singers, dancers, and musicians performed in the show last night.
